Video Shows Disability Advocates Forcibly Removed From Senate Protest

Jennifer Calfas Updated: Jun 22, 2017 3:38 PM ET

U.S. Capitol Police forcibly removed demonstrators and disability advocates — some of whom were in wheelchairs — protesting the Senate's proposed health care bill outside of Majority Leader Mitch McConnell's office Thursday.

"Our lives and liberty shouldn't be stolen to give a tax break to the wealthy," Bruce Darling, an ADAPT organizer at the protest, said in a statement.

Earlier Thursday, McConnell and other Senate Republicans unveiled the once-closely guarded draft of the Senate health care bill aimed at dismantling former President Barack Obama's health care law.

Democrats have fought back against the bill, and four Republican senators said Thursday that they are not ready to vote on the bill yet.

The version of the bill passed by the House last month would cause 23 million Americans to lose coverage by 2026, according to the Congressional Budget Office.
